

Adrián's Speech for Andrés

Good evening everyone. I'm Adrián, Andrés' older brother, and today I want to say a few words for this man who is getting married.

Andy, from the time you were little, you've always been the calmest of the three of us. That peace you carry, your friendly and sociable way of treating people, reminds me so much of Dad. You inherited his gift for making real friends and surrounding yourself with people who love and respect you. Seeing the solid friendships you've built over the years fills me with pride.

But beyond that, I want to thank you for something I probably haven't said enough: thank you for always knowing how to listen to me. In the good times and the bad, you've always been there with attention and an open heart. That means a lot to me. I know you value my words and take them seriously. So much so, that I might even have a small part in what's happening here today.

Do you remember our last serious conversation? I told you what I saw in you — your talent, your passion — and I felt the need to help you find your path... or rather, to get you back on it. You listened. And just a few months later, camera in hand and with very little nervousness, you went to a photo session in Beverly Hills, California... and there you met the woman who is now your wife.

Today I see you as a responsible, talented man with a huge capacity to love. You've turned your passion for photography into your career, and you've done it with patience and soul. And now, on top of that, you've found someone to share all of it with in such a perfect way.

Reka, or as my dad would say with a lot of love and respect: "Re cabrona!" Welcome to this family. Thank you for choosing my brother and for bringing even more light into his life. I wish you both build a story together full of travels, incredible photographs, laughter, and that peace that so much defines Andy.

Brother, may you never lose the calmness you've always had, but may you also never lack adventures and the love you deserve. You know I'm here to celebrate every step you take and to support you in everything.

I love you very much, Andy. Today a beautiful new chapter begins, and I'm so happy to see you this content.

A big round of applause and a toast to the newlyweds!